FALLING INTO WINTER

Read Aloud day is just around the corner. It will be great to show off our stamina and endurance as we celebrate a day of reading to one another. Then November arrives, and we have a lot to pack into that shortened month!

In writing, we have been working on conducting research to further develop our nonfiction topics. Students should be able to name the features and uses of nonfiction. In reading, we are focusing on responding to the text through explanatory writing. This will help our organization as writers. Math class finds us tackling all types of number stories, learning many approaches to multiplication, and exploring division as equal grouping and equal sharing. In science, we enjoyed our inquiry circles, in which we explored topics relating to the central idea that Earth's geological features are in a constant state of change. We are about to kick off our next I.B. planner, which will be a study of culture through the lens of relocation and immigration.

Enjoy the week of Thanksgiving with your families! We will return full-speed ahead as we prepare for an equally busy and exciting December.

Families have asked how they could contribute to our classroom supplies. It would be great if we could add the following to our classroom:

- National Geographic Kids or Sports Illustrated for Kids (whole-class subscription would be ideal!)
- Books, books, books!
- Hand sanitizer

Scholastic offers special deals to classroom teachers. If you are interested in donating to the purchase of a set of books from Scholastic, please see Mr. Carlson.

THANK YOU!
